Join us to learn about the story behind the architecture, landscape, and interiors of Pasadena's postwar Garden Apartments.

Once known as "Millionaire's Row," South Orange Grove Boulevard saw a significant shift in architectural style, from grand Victorian mansions to Mid-Century garden apartments, a result of economic shifts and the population boom that occurred in Pasadena following World War II.

With the success of our Preservation Month Lecture and Tour and due to enthusiastic requests, Pasadena Heritage's Preservation Director Jesse Lattig will again offer this presentation free to the public Monday, July 27th at the Pasadena Central Library Auditorium.
